What is Maine Media Camp?

Maine Media Camp is a week-long introduction to careers in Audio Engineering, Extended Reality, Graphic/Visual Design, Journalism, Live Sound Technology, Marketing Communications, Photography, Video/Film Production, and Web & User Experience. Over 20 professionals from the media will show you the essential workings of the over-the-air and behind-the-scene careers in communications and media. There are seminars where you can pick the brains of the presenters, workshops where you get your hands on gear and produce, and more that show what the industry is like.

Who Can Attend?

Maine Media Camp is open to students entering their sophomore, junior or senior year in high school. For students considering a career in media communications, a week at Maine Media Camp will provide relevant information and a unique opportunity to get experience that will help guide you in your career goals.

What Facilities Will Campers Use?

Facilities include the Wildey Communication Center which houses Video/Film Production studios & editing suites, Sound Recording studios with live room, the iEX Center, One Circle Agency, and labs. Campers will also work in Hart Studio and the Gracie Theatre, also located on the Husson University campus.

Where Do Campers Stay?

The resident campers accommodations are dormitories on the Husson University campus. The campus includes a dining commons complex, student lounges, swimming pool, tennis courts, and more. Campers local to the Bangor area can choose to commute to campus each day and still take part in everything camp has to offer.
